

RAISING HOGS BECOMING ART

Shape and Appearance of Animal Changed to Suit Public Taste

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 4.—There is a new craze in the business of hog raising just to let the pigs grow up. Secretary Wallace of the department of agriculture, told the National Swine Growers' association here. The business now, he declared, is one of art.

It is something of an accomplishment, the secretary said, to control the shape of the pig's nose and ears, its tail. Another matter of merit is to control the form and the color of the shape, and make the animal as useful as well as useful, according to the secretary's view.

AVOIDS FAMINE DANGER. The secretary said that hog growers are changing the form as the needs of the market change. He added that producing more fat or more lean, or bacon or more lard, larger hams or smaller hams as the changing character and the supply of feed or changing tastes of the consumer make necessary. It is a real job, the secretary asserted and one in which the federal government is vitally interested because, among other reasons, great meat eating and meat production was one that never suffers in famine.

Such a nation as this, he said, has its livestock great storage reservoirs of grains and grasses and great natural plants for the refining of foods suitable for human consumption "to the extent unrealized by most of the world." During the last year, the secretary said, "hogs have paid for the meat they ate about twice the price for which it could have been sold on the market."

NEW FARM CREDIT ACT. A vigorous defense of the efforts of the national government to relieve the cultural depression during the past months was made by Mr. Wallace. He cited the various measures enacted by congress to relieve the situation and predicted the enactment of a next session of congress of a better credit act.

UNCLE JOE ON HOMEWARD TRIP

Veteran Legislator Full of Pep at Start of Motor Journey

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—With an old slouch hat cocked on the side of his head, Uncle Joe Cannon started by automobile for Danville, Ill., leaving over the old National Pike. His parents took 83 years ago in coming westward.

The veteran legislator was full of pep as he stepped into his car at the Capitol and told Lester Morris, for years his chauffeur and his sole companion on the trip, to "give her gas." He pulled down the old reached for a cigar and smiled.

DECLINES ANOTHER CAR. Just before leaving, Mr. Cannon received a telegram from H. H. Frank, the automobile manufacturer at Acushnet, N. Y., offering to send down parents took 83 years ago in coming westward, but he declined.

This old car is good enough for me and I like to ride with Lester," said.

Uncle Joe will stop tonight at Springfield, Thursday at Columbus, Friday at Indianapolis. Then with his old chauffeur, he will drive to Danville Saturday. A telegram today from the Quaker City at Richmond, Ind., asked Mr. Cannon would arrive there. He might be signally honored, people were quakers and uncle named for Joseph Gurney, famous leader of the sect.

LIKES THE BUMPS. The ride most of the way on the road with Lester so the wind and this sweater vest will promote, he said. "I don't like soft seats. When I ride in the back of a car I usually occupy the folding seat. I like the bumps at 57 years they remind me of life."

COURT ORDER STOPS MATINEE

Leading Woman Kidnaped Legally by Deputy Sheriff

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Throwing a party to an applauding audience in the Park Music hall as she glided off stage Tuesday after singing, "Who's the Girl?" at the matinee performance of "The Girl Who Came to Stay," Miss Sally Fields, leading woman, was stopped by a deputy sheriff, who attached her with a body attachment. When she read the order directing her to "attach the said Sally Fields, that you may have her body before the court," one of the justices of the said court.

The legal kidnapping of the leading woman interrupted the performance and otherwise caused consternation, so the manager appeared before the foot of the stage and explained that as soon as the Fields could return from court, the show would go on.

Fields' trouble grew out of Miss Fields' refusal to pay for a portrait which she had had been done by a house painter instead of an artist, and which had caused her friends to ask her if it was supposed to be. Judgment was obtained against her, but she could not be found. The court issued a writ of attachment for her arrest. She was still elusive, and attorneys learned she was at the theatre the body attachment was made.

LANDLORDS IN VIENNA STRIKE

Austrian Rail Workers May Walk Out in Retaliation

VIENNA, Oct. 4.—(By the Associated Press)—The landlord's strike began Tuesday in modified form. They demand modification of the rent restriction law enabling them to advance rates 10 per cent on prewar rates. Proclamations issued by the authorities that the stoppage of water and other threats made by the landlords are illegal, making them liable to damages, together with the refusal of the Socialist janitors to enforce the landlord's measures, have tended to limit the movement.

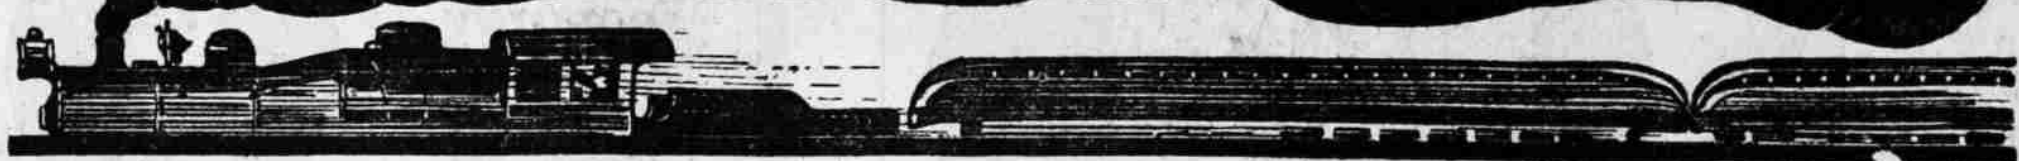

The railway men have taken a hand and threaten to strike if the landlords persist. The latter, however, say that they are only beginning and will carry their activities much further.

In many of the apartments the tenants have organized for the purpose of protection, and have appointed acting janitors to guard the water, electric and gas connections.

UTAH TAKES PART IN LARAMIE CONTEST

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The state of Utah was granted permission in the supreme court Tuesday to file a brief in support of the motion of the state of Colorado and others for a rehearing in the case brought by the state of Wyoming, arising out of the diversion of the Laramie river, which resulted in a decision last spring in which the court held priority of appropriation was controlling in establishing the right to use water taken from interstate streams.
